A compelling story that offers an insight into the life of a troubled teen ...

Kim Miller grew up freewheeling the dusty streets of country NSW. From back streets to boys' home, from Pizza Hut to PhD, from Cathedral to Correctional Centre, Kim's travelled the road. These days he works in Newcastle with people in and out of prison, managing a community chaplaincy project called Home For Good.

'They Told Me I Had To Write This' is his second book.
